Product Overview

Pollen is a natural food, not a supplement. Bee Pollen is made by honeybees and serves as the food of the young bee. It is one of nature's most completely nourishing foods as it contains nearly all nutrients required by humans. Bee-gathered pollens are rich in proteins (approximately 40% protein), free amino acids, vitamins including B-complex, and folic acid.

It contains many elements that products of animal origin do not possess. Bee pollen is more rich in proteins than any animal source and contains more amino acids than beef, eggs, or cheese of equal weight. About half of its protein is in the form of free amino acids that are ready to be used directly by the body.
